GOVERNOR HUNT'S OPINION.

CHICAGO, January 5. The Tribune's Washington special says ex-Governor Hunt of Colo[rado] last night received a dispatch confirma[tory] of the story already darkly hinted at that [the] females captured by the Utes were out[raged] by their Indian captors. The Pueblo [C]olorado Chieftain of New Year's day contain[ed] a card signed by Mrs. Meeker in which [the] crime is charged upon the Utes. Governor [Hu]nt said the reception of the dispatch made [him] sick at heart. He did not make it public [last] night because he did not want to antago[nize] the policy of Schurz. He said the publi[cati]on of a story of that kind here would at [once] arouse a sentiment as hostile to the savages [as th]at which exists in the state of Colorado. [I do] not believe it will be safe to bring these [chief]s to Washington, said he. If a relative [of m]ine had suffered this unnamable indignity [I w]ould shoot him down in the streets of this [city].

INDIANS AT DEL NORTE.

[D]ENVER, January 5. Dispatches from Del [Nort]e state that twelve Utes and an escort on [their] way east, arrived at that point this evening. [They] will reach Alamosa to-morrow. They [are] objects of much curiosity especially Ouray [and] Jack. All preserve a dogged silence and [rece]ive the homage of public curiosity with [stoli]d indifference.

INDIANS TO GO TO WASHINGTON.

[W]ASHINGTON, January 5. Secretary Schurz [toda]y received the following:

ALAMOSA, Col., January 4.
[The ch]iefs arrived last night. He advises that [th]e Indians be taken to Washington im[medi]ately on their arrival here.
[Si]gned]

HATCH,
Commissioner.

D. & R. G. Success in the Supreme Court.

[W]ASHINGTON, January 5. After a sharp [strug]gle about the Arkansas canon case before [the U]nited States supreme court to day between [the D]enver and Rio Grande railway company [and t]he Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railway [comp]any, the former company succeeded in [getti]ng an early day appointed for hearing their [applic]ation for a mandamus to compel Judge [Halle]tt to execute the decree of the supreme [court] of last April without condition of pay[ment] for the work done by the Atchison com[pany o]r any other condition whatever. A cer[tified] copy of Judge Hallett's decree is expect[ed to] arrive by the day fixed for the hearing.

A Terribly Fatal Fire.

[NE]W YORK, January 5.—A fire broke out this [aftern]oon in the basement of the Turner Hotel, [East F]ourth street, occupied by William Win[kle as] a ball room, and when the flames were [exting]uished, William Geib, ten years old, Lou[is Sch]midt, thirty years old, H. Gehweiter, [twenty-]five years old, and Teresa Erbard, twen[ty-five] years old, were found on the top floor [dead]. Winkle and his wife were severely [burned], and were sent to the hospital. Anna [Boure] received internal injuries by jumping [from th]e fourth story window, and was badly [burned] about the hands and face. The damage [to the] building and stock is about $12,000.

[The] progress of the fire was so great that it [was ha]rdly five minutes after the first engine [compan]y arrived before the entire inside of the [building] seemed to be alive with flame, tongues [of whi]ch ran up the woodwork with a speed [that] put to naught the best efforts of the fire[men]. The premises No, 66 and 68 were occu[pied as] Turner Hall proper, and in the upper [part of] No. 64 William Winkle, proprietor, [lived] with his family and several other per[sons].

[As so]on as the firemen could reach the roof [they cu]t holes in it and broke in the sky light. [The fir]e had already done its fearful work to [sev]eral victims, surrounded as they were [by flam]es and cut off from all access to safety [on acco]unt of the burning staircase. Several [persons] sustained severe injuries by leaping [from th]e highest story in the building. One [woman, wh]ile crying frantically for aid to the fire[men ben]eath was all the while pushing a wo[man w]ho seemed to be resisting, from the fourth story window. She finally leaped and struck the ground on her feet with a sickening crash, breaking both legs and arms and almost crushed her death. Of the twelve or fifteen persons sleeping in No. 64 four burned to death and five were injured. The little boy was burned to a crisp. The others were either dead when taken from the burning building or died before they reached the station house. The actual causes of the fire is unknown. The lower hall and a look aloft showed the flames had every possible advantage and must have shot up from the burning basement staircase. All persons known to have been in the burning building are accounted for. Crowds of people, mostly of German extraction, were around the burned building.

There were no fire escapes attached to the building. It was not until the thumping of the firemen's axes on the boards and tin over their heads of the house that the men and women underneath were roused to learn their danger. Water was now brought into the building and the firemen's work began to tell. But their attention was demanded on another quarter from the elevated porch of the central part of the building. The cries of agony and shouts were heard for help and the firemen cut through the roof and sides until they obtained an entrance to the garret filled with smoke and charred by the flames that leaped from rafter to rafter. Here on the east side had slept George Muller, E. and H. Rufe, L. Meyer, H. Gefewiler, and L. Schmidt, waiters. In the west side bedroom were Teresa Ethardt, Anna Boure, and Rose. The floor was in flame on which the terrified men and women ran wildly about gasping for air and shouting for help.

George Muller, and E. and H. Publ made their way to the front, and reached the roof more than half suffocated, and burned here and there. Louis Meyer sprang from a window to the yard below of No. 18 Third street, a distance of sixty feet or more, and was picked up nearly dead. Louis Schmidt was found, after the firemen ventured in, crouching in a corner from whence he had been unable to escape, dead, and burned to a crisp. Henry Gehrwiler, unable to follow his more fortunate companions to the front, jumped from the window into the yard of a Third street house, and died from the effects of his leap. Every bone in his body was broken. Teresa Erhardt never left her room. She was found burned to death. Her face was black almost beyond recognition. A. Boure sprang from the window rather than die in the fire, and was found in the yard on the west side of the building. She was badly burned, and with the injuries caused by the fall, she cannot live. Rose, the last of the servants, sprang out also, and striking on an arbor in the yard of No. 64 East Fourth street, in her descent, broke both legs, both arms, and received internal injuries.

LATER. The dead—Louis Schmidt, 30 years of age, a waiter, was burned to a crisp in his sleeping room. Henry Schweiter, 25 years, waiter who jumped from the fourth story rear window died in the Fifth street police station. William Gelb, 10 years of age, was taken out on the roof of an adjoining building, died before he could be placed in an ambulance. Teresa Erhardt, 25 years, servant, was burned to death in her room.

Injured—Wm. Winckle, 40 years of age, lessee of the hall, was severely burned about the hands, face and arms. Josephine Winckle, 40 years old and wife of the lessee had her face terribly disfigured with burns and her body badly blistered. There is little chance of recovery. Anna Boure, 30 years old, a servant, jumped from the window and was internally injured and badly burned. She will probably die. Another servant about 26 years old, jumped from the window. Both legs and arms are broken. Louis Meyer, waiter, sprang from the window. His limbs are broken and he is internally injured. Margaret Gieb, aged 30, sister of Mrs. Winckle, had her face and feet severely burned.

Another Horror—A Celluloid Explosion.

[NEW]ARK, January 5.—An explosion took [place this] morning in the celluloid manufac[turing co]mpany by which three men were in[stantly ki]lled and two others so burned they [cannot] survive. The workmen were in their accustomed places, when from an unknown cause, a mass of celluloid which is highly inflammable material suddenly exploded destroying a one story brick building with all its contents. Wm. Fenter, aged 21, died. His body was found in the ruins a ghastly spectacle. The remains of Fred Stiles of Roselle were so charred that it was scarcely recognizable. J. Yates, residence unknown, was also killed. Spencer Atwood died in ten minutes from concussion of the brain. Bogart and Fred Pierce were fearfully burned and taken to the hospital. There is no hope of their recovery. Stephen W. Wade is severely but not dangerously injured. The loss on the building and contents is estimated at $10,000; insured. The manager of the company says the explosion probably occurred from the gas at the machine run by Fred Stiles who was killed. The machine was used for mixing and grinding material.

Hardly Probable.

CHICAGO, January 5. The St. Louis dispatch says: Near the Relay depot at East St. Louis, where there are marshes, ditches, &c. almost without number, the police think they have discovered evidence which establishes the existence of a gang of murderers and to a certain extent solves the mystery surrounding the disappearance of several well known men. Judge Mayo, of Olney, was last seen at this place on board an outgoing train, and since that time no less than a dozen other travelers have vanished in the same remarkable manner in that vicinity. The theory of the detectives is that passengers are lured from the night trains to the platform, knocked senseless, or killed outright, robbed, and buried in the swamp at leisure. A thorough investigation will be made.

The Maine Fraud.

OPINION OF THE DECISION.

AUGUSTA, January 4. The decison of the court has been discussed freely by the crowds upon the streets and the hotels and elsewhere to day. Republicans are greatly excited and jubilant, and regard it as a consummate triumph for their cause. The opinion is freely expressed in the best informed circles that the opposition cannot stand up and defy the court. It is the opinion of leading republicans that the governor can do no less than cancel the certificates issued to persons not elected according to the decision of the court.

The fusionists have no definite plan matured, and it will be difficult to develop any to-night, as not more than twenty members are present in the city. The number present is about the same as in ordinary years, when nothing unusual has been pending.

A few democrats say the governor had no business to submit the questions to the court; that he had done his work according to the constitution and laws, and should have rested his case there. D. T. Pike, a leading democrat, says that Garcelon belittled himself by taking any notice of Morrill's letter. He had done his work, and that ought to have been the end of it. R. W. Black, a leading greenbacker, says the court went out of its way to answer questions not put to it. Colonel William Deckey, a member of the legislature, says the decision of the court will have no effect upon the organization of the legislature, as the certificates have already been issued. This is understood to be the position Pillsbury will take in the Standard to-morrow morning. Others say the opinion of the court is a farce, and will be replied to word for word. Three of the counted in members have already declared that they will not participate; and it is thought that the opinion of the court will have the same effect upon other certificated members, as there is not a single case of the thirty-seven that the opinion does not fully cover. Hon. James C. Talbot, of Washington, and Jesse T. Hobson, of Lincoln, the counted in senators, have already stated that they would not accept the seats, should the decision of the court be against them.

Lawyers say if this opinion is disregarded it will be the first instance of the kind in the history of Maine. It has been ascertained that the executive department, in more than fifty cases, since Maine was a state, has asked the judgment of the supreme judicial court on important questions of law, and never in a single instance has it been disregarded. D. Parker, a member of the governor's council, defends his position in this matter, and says he acted conscientiously and honorably. He has not read the opinion carefully and could not give an opinion as to the result. Secretary of State Gove says he is not sufficiently familiar with law to say whether the governor and council could review their action.

COMMENTS OF NEW YORK PRESS.

The Tribune says of the events in Maine if it be sure these answers are correct there will be no legal excuse whatever for the exclusion of a single one of the representatives to whom the certificates have been refused. It remains to been seen first whether the governor or council will have the decency to reverse their unlawful action, or second whether the high handed violation of the law can prevail.

The Sun says the decision of the supreme court will impress the whole country as sound and eminently just. We concur entirely in the view taken by the learned judges. We ask not who loses or who gains by the decision. It is a matter of infinitely small moment whether one party or another shall be temporarily in power when compared with the importance in preserving in absolute integrity the principles of the government. Those democrats in Maine who have received certificates of their election to the legislature, who, knowing that they didn't receive the majority or plurality of votes and that the certificates are based on technical defects in the returns, have declined to quality or act have done themselves lasting honor.

The World says Governor Garcelon never should have been in doubt and it is to be fairly inferred from the questions submitted by Garcelon to the court that upon careful examination of his course, he satisfied himself that his greenback councillors and his cipher alley advisors, had led him into a false position. May we not now begin to hope that certain democratic leaders and editors who have been over tenderly disposed toward the cipher alley methods of the greenback members of Garcelon's council will eventually see the bitter folly of such methods even from the lowest partisan point of view and join with the world in insisting that the democratic party shall hereafter cease to curry with demagogues and communists in any part of the country.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—The Post, which has heretofore staunchly defended Governor Garcelon's action, takes the position to-day that although he is not under any legal compulsion to follow the last opinion of the supreme court, he should nevertheless do so, argues that he can accept it not only without reproach for his course hitherto, but in consistent pursuit of that course, which always was based upon previous supreme court decisions now reversed. The Post also predicts that if the governor is legally unable so recall his certificates, and thus make the necessary correction, it will be made by the general assembly with the full consent of the democratic party.

WASHINGTON, January 5. The Post to-day gives up the contest in Maine in behalf of the democratic party and advises complete submission.

AUGUSTA, January 5. Pillsbury is out in the Standard denouncing the opinion of the court as partisan and urging the counted-in members to stand up for their rights and not be bulldozed.

AUGUSTA, January 5.—About one-half of the members have arrived. The republicans assert they will have possession of both branches of the legislature by Thursday night.

AUGUSTA, January 5.—The governor and council held no session for business to day, but have been in discussion in regard to the course to be pursued. A guard is still maintained at the state house, with some two hundred men in a room opposite the agricultural room. There are sixty stand of arms stacked ready for immediate use. An eye guard is kept upon all passing through or leaving the building. Although every train is bearing crowds into the city, there has been perfect order. The mayor has two hundred extra police on duty. Neither side has absolutely determined on a course which is not subject to radical amendment. This much may be said, however, that the fusionists deem it all important that they should have a quorum, and are resorting to all possible means to bring about the result. This afternoon a deputy was dispatched across the country to Farmington to endeavor to persuade Voter, who has publicly refused to accept a certificate, to attend the session to-morrow. Mr. Straut, of Portland, in his own behalf and that of his colleague's will ask of the governor and council certificates as members of the legislature under the decision of the judges. Captain Goss, of Bath, and the republican members elect from five disfranchised cities will ask for the same right. They claim that whatever may be done with the towns, the case of the cities is clear and unmistakable. Every republican deprived of his seat is here or will be here and be present. But five fusionists can be counted on who will stay away.

Grant as a Land Pirate.

NEW YORK, January 5.—The Herald's Washington special says that Whithorne, of Tennessee, returns to Washington from a visit to his district with a report that Tennessee is much interested in the ex president's visit to Mexico, and he says that if the ex president on his return should declare himself in favor of the annexation of the whole or a part of Mexico, of the acquisition of the northern Mexican states, or of assuming some protectorate over them, this would gain him a great number of adherents in the southern states among a large clarge class of the restless and adventurous. Whithorne appears to believe that the ex-president's visit to Mexico has some such purpose, and that it was arranged in San Francisco, which has long been the headquarters for fillibustering. If the ex-president should develop or favor the annexation policy, Whithorne is persuaded that he would have a very large and enthusiastic following in all parts of the south. The town is very dull yet, and the above is a specimen of the gossip of the day. It is highly complimentary to the ex president to offer him support on condition that he shall turn land pirate.

In Favor of Emory.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The Tribune's Washington special says the president will probably decide early this week whether he will reappoint Governor Emory of Utah or send some one else there in his place. The legislature of the territory meets in its regular biennial session on the 11th of this month and if Emory is to be governor of Utah for four years longer he ought to back and at his post at that time. Emory's administration was satisfactory to Grant and has been so to the present administration. Governor Emory brings with him a complete answer to the assertion that the Gentiles lack confidence in him and that he lacks courage to act fearlessly and promptly in an emergency. In the letters and petitions which he will present to the president at least ninetenths of the gentile citizens of Utah of any prominence or influence and the representatives of a much larger proportion of Gentile capital invested there have signed petitions or have written letters to the president asking for his retention.

Fernando Wood's Opinion.

NEW YORK, January 5. Fernando Wood speaking of his new funding bill said recently. A few people realize the vast amount of money in this country which is required to be kept invested in government bonds. Why there are over ten millions invested, tied up in the courts to await the result of litigation. All money which by law is required to be put where it will be safe beyond peradventure must be invested in government. Great capitalists invest money in order to place it beyond the hazards of business. Thus Vanderbilt has fourteen millions in registered four per cents, and the other day when Flood, the California millionaire gave his daughter a present of a couple of million dollars, it was not in money but in registered four per cent. bonds. Mr. Wood also said the committee on ways and means would ask for legislation reducing the tariff on steel rails, placing all drugs on the free list, and amending the sugar tariff.

Legal Tender Case Postponed.

WASHINGTON, January 5. Chief Justice Waite announced this morning a decision of the United States supreme court upon the motion recently made by Senator Edmunds to advance the case of Augustus Juillard, against Thomas S. Greenman, generally known as the legal tender case, which now stands No. 779 on the calendar. The motion was denied. The chief justice said the court would refuse to grant all motion to advance cases involving important constitutional questions so long as they could not be heard before a full bench.

California Legislature Convenes.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 5.—The legislature assembled to day. The fusionists talk of organizing the assembly between the democratic workingmen and new constitution assemblymen. It was organized, but fell through, and on the first ballot the republicans elected J. F. Cowdery, of San Francisco, speaker. The republican senatorial caucus to day resolved to send a dispatch to Morrill and Blaine, congratulating them on the decision of the supreme court of Maine and adjuring them to stand firm and maintain their rights.

Wheat Panic in Chicago.

CHICAGO, January 5. There was a decided break in the wheat market this afternoon of about three cents, owing to a rumor on change that the bank of California had failed. Nobody seemed able to say where the rumor started and as prices at the close were the lowest of the day, it is probable that some operators had been pretty thoroughly shaken by the story. Aside from distressing rumors of that sort, however, it is natural that the break should occur, as prices are above those of all surrounding markets, including New York, Liverpool and Milwaukee.

Parnell's Success.

NEW YORK, January 5.—The proceeds of last night's meeting in Madison Square Garden are twenty-five hundred dollars and will be given for the relief of the distress in Ireland. Parnell to-day received a telegram from the secretary of the relief committee of Virginia City, Nevada, stating that $15,000 for the suffering poor of Ireland had been forwarded him and giving the agitator a pressing invitation to visit that city.

Specie Importations.

NEW YORK, January 5. The specie importations for the week ending January 2 are $427,997. The weekly returns make a total of over $84,260,495 for the entire year of 1879, against $19,150,873 officially reported for 1878. Taking into account the specie imported and the products of mines, there is in the country probably fully $125,000,000 more coin than a year ago.

FOREIGN NOTES.

The citizens of Toronto voted 4,279 to 2,302 against a grant of $10,000 for the Irish relief fund.

Thirty thousand people attended the anti rent meeting, in Clare Morris, County Galway, on Sunday.

The famine in the province of Seistan, Russia, is very severe. The people are selling their children for food.

Count Bachasson de Montalonet, life senator, formerly minister of the interior under Louis Phillippe, is dead, aged seventy eight years.

Enormous quantities of wreckage are floating on the Seine. Many swimming baths and a number of barges have been crushed to atoms.

The steamer Pansa, Captain Dannimon, of New York, for Bremen, is ashore off Terschelling, North Sea. It made so much water that the crew were obliged to leave her, and were landed by tugs.

JUDGE HALLETT JULY 14, 1879.

If the Rio Grande has the better right to the grand canon, it has the same better right all the way to Leadville.

JUDGE HALLETT DEC. 31, 1879.

The Denver & Rio Grande company has no prior right of location between south Arkansas and Leadville, the Pueblo company having first located its line on that part of the route.

Governor Garcelon now wishes he hadn't.

Strong is in Denver. He thinks he can keep the D. & R. G. out of their line more than 100 days.

The Register-Call is very angry at the Mountaineer for advocating criticism of officials. As usual the Register-Call argues with mud.

A paid up debt can have as "sweet memories," and pleasant "odors" as an unpaid one. Judge Belford should direct his ponderous intellect to the above.

Judge Hallett's explanation of his change of mind between July 14, 1879, and Dec. 31, 1879, in reference to the right of way to Leadville will be interesting.

It is barely possible that General Manager Strong, assisted by Judge Hallett, may keep Leadville out of a road a few weeks longer, but some progress is being made.

The Denver Tribune should be profoundly grateful for the free advertising the Leadville Chronicle is doing for it. The Tribune has increased immensely in circulation this fall.

The bright local columns of the Leadville Democrat are presided over by W. C. Payne, who for a long time was city editor of the Chronicle and had a wide experience in journalism in the east.

Governor Bullock declines to accept the English mission. He perhaps has the widest and fairest grasp of public questions of any public man in New England. He would make a good president.

The Register-Call thinks Colorado Springs is "one of the least important towns of Colorado." The Register-Call is printed at a town called Central City, which is one of the suburbs of Denver.

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE could never endorse Senator Chaffee's return to Colorado politics. It called him hard names last winter. Leadville Democrat.

The GAZETTE never rakes up old sores, but it will be consistent when there is need of speaking.

The supreme court of Maine has decided that Governor Garcelon has counted out most of the republican members without cause. The republican party in having the law on its side has every advantage. We trust that it will retain that advantage by only appealing to lawful methods for the redress of its grievances.

Now that the Ute negotiations have failed and the scalps of General Hatch and the rest of the commissioners are in danger, it is acknowledged in Washington that Mr. Schurz's Indian policy is a mistake. Pueblo Democrat.

In this the Democrat is a little to subsequent. The Ute negotiations are uncompleted not a failure. General Hatch at the writing of the above was at Lake City and never has been in danger.

Judge Belford on Finance.

Judge Belford has recently written a letter on the subject of the retirement of the greenback, and silver to the Leadville Herald. That we may do him no injustice in our criticism, we quote that part of his letter which appeared in the Herald.

"I cordially approve your views on the greenback and silver question. While I hold a seat in congress, I will never vote to retire from public use the greenback. It is the charm that carries the sacred memories of the war. It is the nation's money bearing its seal, and sanctified by the odor of nationality. The national banks, through John Sherman, and the New York gold ring, desire to monopolize the entire monetary field. The desire to enhance the value of money by diminishing its quantity. Let us have money dear, and everything else cheap, is their cry. Retire the greenbacks, stop the coinage of silver, make money scarce, and double our fortunes. The people are not asking for a retirement of the greenbacks. No county, state or national convention has demanded it. During the last campaign we declared that we were in favor of a currency, comprised of gold, silver and greenbacks convertible into gold. Now we are told that we must retire and cancel the greenbacks, and stop the further coinage of silver. For one I will consent to neither proposition. As long as you coin silver dollars, so long do you multiply the safeguards and hedge in the policy of resumption. If you should coin a thousand million silver dollars, and lodge them into the treasury, you would feel that no effect looking to the destruction of the policy of resumption, could succeed. I think it would be wise to make the greenback taxable as other property is, but there is no occasion for its retirement unless we intend to give the entire financial field to the banks. I think we should coin all our silver, and issue silver certificates for every dollar of coin found in the treasury. The people would have no objection to a currency of that sort. It would have a coin basis and could be instantly converted into coin.

In the first place we may state that Judge Belford looks at the question from a wrong standpoint. To him it is a question of sentiment and politics, whereas it is only a question of cold common sense, and construction of constitutional law. That part of the letter about the "odor of nationality," and "sacred memories of the war," was gotten off by Judge Belford at the state convention in 1878, and is a little stale. The only sentiment that can possibly be entertained in regard to the greenback is that of honor. The credit of the government was bad. It could not borrow money. So it made a forced loan by paying its debts in due bills (called greenbacks), and made them a legal tender. If the "sacred memories" of the war demand anything they demand that the debts incurred in putting down the rebellion should be paid as soon as possible.

But as we said this is not a question of sentiment or politics. It is a question of constitutional law. If Daniel Webster knew anything about our constitution, the legal tender act is clearly not constitutional. The supreme court was packed in order to get a majority to say that it was even constitutional to issue legal tender paper in order to save the union from destruction. There is not a respectable constitutional lawyer in the country who will not unequivocally declare the emission of legal tender paper money, at the present time, unconstitutional. We have frequently quoted in these columns the remarks of Daniel Webster on this subject which ought to be conclusive. It is strange that Judge Belford, a lawyer, should have omitted to notice this.

Judge Belford's only economic objection to the retirement of the greenback, and it is the only objection contained in his letter worth considering, is that it will enhance the value of money by diminishing its quantity. At present there are $346,000,000 of greenbacks outstanding and his letter leads us to infer that the currency would be reduced that much. This is evidently not true. The last debt statement was not given in full and hence we can not give accurate figures in regard to the amount of coin on hand for resumption purposes. But there is probably about $170,000,000. As this would be released from the treasury, it would therefore reduce the currency the difference between $346,000,000 and $170,000,000 or $176,000,000. But the greenbacks would not be retired in a day. They would be retired gradually, and in our opinion the currency would not then be reduced at all. The national banking system is not a monopoly as Judge Belford intimates. It is a free banking system that will allow any association to issue nine tenths as much national bank money as it has capital to put in government bonds for the security of the notes. The only monopoly about it is that a man must have actual capital, and we presume that even Judge Belford would prefer to have the issue of banking notes limited to such parties. If there is need of more currency the national banking currency will be expanded as the greenbacks are contracted. The real demands of trade will regulate the supply of currency, and not a fiat of congress. Colorado can to-day double or quadruple the national banking currency of the state, if her capitalists find a scarcity of currency. With a free national banking law, having no semblance or monopoly except that a man must have capital, there are no fears to be entertained as to undue contraction of the currency.

The great objection to Judge Belford's letter is that it shows the writer is ignorant or lacks candor, it is indifferent, to us which. Here is a grave constitutional question involved. He skips it and insults his constituents by telling them the greenback has an "odor." In discussing the real economic question involved, he overlooks all vital facts bearing on it and instead rails at John Sherman, the gold ring, national banks, etc. If ever we were doubtful whether Judge Belford should be renominated, we are doubtful no longer. He is getting to be a political montebank of the most contemptible kind. It is only necessary to review in a word his financial vagaries. In April, 1878, he wrote a long letter to the Boulder News, showing resumption was not feasible. In August, 1878, he drew up a platform for the state republican convention (which was not adopted), which favored resumption. In September, 1878, in his speeches with Patterson, particularly the one at Castle Rock he defended and upheld the national banking system. In the letter above he denounces it as a monopoly. In the debate on the Warner silver bill last spring, and also on his return last summer he denounced the free and unlimited coinage part of the bill as an "unqualified steal" and this same political montebank comes to our state convention in September and tries to get the convention to pass a resolution which demanded this "unqualified steal." Now we want a man who is sound enough and sensible enough to imbibe and hold an opinion that will last over night.

James Russell Lowell's turn for an Atlantic Monthly breakfast comes next. He will be seventy February 22, 1889.

An English Artist's Home.

When the doors of Burlington House have closed on the labors of the foregoing year, the doors of his house at Palace-gate are thrown open. Let us enter with a ticket of leave, which announces that Mrs. Millais is at home. Some eight hundred guests pass through the brilliantly lighted marble hall, between its rows of stately pillars, and file slowly up and down the broad staircase, along which runs a dado of marble, and on which lies a rich Indian carpet. On the first landing Mrs. Millais and her daughter welcome the coming and speed the parting guests, making a foreground worthy of the scenery beyond. Against the wall of the wide landing a marble basin, which has a special water supply of its own—is surrounded by ferns and moss. A sea-lion, with a fish in its mouth and water issuing from its nostrils, has apparently just risen from its depths. This curiosity of natural history, designed by the possessor and executed in highly polished black marble, is so life like that one can imagine Frank Buckland claiming it as a long-lost member of his own peculiar family. Marble busts by Burns of Mrs. Millais and her two daughters preside over all. Passing onwards we turn to the left, and enter the lofty studio, forty feet long, which seems to vanish into the green-woods of the tapestry beyond. Any curious stranger finding himself alone in this chamber of art might be startled, not so much by the weirdness of the lay figures as by the various devices of the artist, were they suddenly to reveal themselves. At the end of the room a long trap door opens, by which the pictures descend into the regions below. Close at hand there is a winding iron staircase for the artist and his assistants. To the right a heavy curtain can be withdrawn, showing an immense folding door, through which the art treasures are carted away to the Royal Academy on receiving day. In other parts of the wall mysterious and invisible little doors open, serving the purpose of bolt holes for the artist when flying from a sitter or a retreat for the father when making a sudden descent on his family. Meanwhile the easel is superseded by the piano, round which a group of distinguished musicians are gathered, and near them many members of the upper ten are airing their charms, and their diamonds in the Bude light of royalty.

The host makes his genial presence felt everywhere. But the crowd increases fast and the pressure becomes a little difficult to bear. We pass through the folding doors into a scene of greater tranquility where we find quiet nooks and undiscovered corners under the shadows of spreading palms in the midst of flowers. The chairs and couches, sofas and settees, are covered with exquisite brocade and are so grouped and fashioned that friends may unite in council or couples enjoy an uninterupted tete-a-tete at will. The fire-places are filled with plants through the leaves and flowers of which glitter the sides of repousse brass. Rare cabinets quaintly outlined, stand sharply defined against the still undecorated pale gray walls. All are beautiful, but the one with silver images in niches is also historic having belonged to Charles I. In the middle drawing room a large square bay window overlooks the broad walk of Kensington Gardens in the day time and shows the living panorama as it passes to and fro; at night the tableau-vivant becomes a picture of still life, when the rich crimson-velvet drapery is drawn behind Michael Angelo's group of "Leda and the Swan," artistically bringing out the noble features of the composition. En suite with the drawing rooms a dining room harmonizes with the rest, the floors of all being parqueterie and the carpets, like that of the staircase, Indian. From a door behind a large screen the mysteries of service are silently performed by aid of a lift. Having gone the round of the home circuit, we emerge once more on the lovely spot where the sea lion is yet in the act of swallowing his fish, and the water is still flowing from his nostrils, where Mrs. Millais and her daughter are still welcoming their guests, and where groups of well known faces, hailing from the world of politics, literature, fashion and the arts, discuss the questions of the day. London World.

Matthew Arnold.

He is all mind; to understand him you must read his books, or, better still, talk with him, provided he accords you that high honor, which he will not lightly, having always held his own intellectual powers in just veneration. Aristotle's ideal of the perfect man embraced a certain amount of self-appreciation; and Mr. Arnold has studied Aristotle. There is an Oxford story which shows how fully the man at an early age understood his own dignity, and felt, perhaps a corresponding contempt for that of others. A certain Wilkins, of Merton, if I remember rightly, had asked Arnold, then an undergraduate, to dine with him at 7 o'clock. About 8, Master Matthew strolled leisurely into Merton and asked if a "Mr. Jenkins" lived in that college. The porter happened to know him, and said: "No, sir, but there's a Mr. Wilkins, who's been expecting you to dinner ever so long." "Ah, dear me, yes; Wilkins so it was." I won't vouch for the names, but the reality of the story is unquestionable.

Mr. Arnold has long outgrown such affectations, and now stands before the world as perhaps the most perfect specimen of modern English culture at all events, the most perfect specimen of the Destructive school, as Cardinal Newman is of the Conservative. He believes in little, and in that little feebly. On the other hand, he disbelieves in much, and notably in dogmatic Christianity, Radicalism, immediate perfectability of the negro, the moralizing effect of railways and free trade, the beauty of repealing the Contagious Diseases act, and many other things which win belief from others. In short, he discredits nearly every modern nostrum for our ills, and many an ancient one he utterly rejects.

He is something more than a man of culture—he has worked out his thoughts to good effect. Mr. Arnold's command of pure English is so perfect that in reading some of his finest poems you forget one notable characteristic.

We are so accustomed to rhyme that we scarcely consider anything poetic which lacks it; but Matthew Arnold has lyrics of such exquisite music that it only gradually draws on you that he has dispensed with the jingling factor in English verse. London Truth.

The Struggles of an Inventor.

Mr. Erastus B. Bigelow, the inventor of the carpet loom, who died recently in Boston, had a long and hard struggle before he attained the success that was his object. His father was poor and the boy was set to work on a neighbor's farm with very small wages. When thirteen years old he made his first invention, a hand-loom for weaving suspended webbing. Next he invented a machine for spinning yarn which brought him in a few hundred dollars but was not long in use. When sixteen years old he attended an academy at his own expense and soon after became interested in stenography and mastered it with such ease that it occurred to him that he would write a book for the guidance of others. So he wrote and published "The Self-Taught Stenographer," and, encouraged by the sale of seventy-five dollars' worth of the books in Boston in ten days, he fancied that he might make a fortune by canvassing the country with it. To this end he formed a partnership with a young medical student, and the two canvassed New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, but the enterprise ended in a failure and left him $400 in debt. Next time he took a partner and began the manufacture of twine. Later he went to Wareham, Mass., to manufacture cotton, but failed and increased his indebtedness to $1,400. He then came to this city and took lessons in penmanship, and soon became so skilled that he supported himself for some time by giving instruction. This wandering existence did not satisfy him and he returned home, and after taking a course in classical studies he entered his name as a student of medicine. His thirst for knowledge again led him to invention, and sleeping one night under a Marseilles quilt he conceived the notion that a power-loom might be made to weave such fabrics. Suspending his studies he soon matured the plan of a loom and constructed a machine which worked satisfactorily. He made an arrangement with a Boston house which promised him the needed capital, but he was again disappointed, for the house failed, and his father also was not only unfortunate in business, but in failing health. In his journeyings the young man had seen the process of weaving coach lace by hand looms. He became satisfied that the work could be done by a power loom, and having first ascertained that the demand for the goods was such that its manufacture would be profitable, he concentrated all his energies upon inventing a loom suited to the work. After six weeks of extraordinary mental application he had a power loom in successful operation, which has called out the highest praise.

This invention gave him a reputation, and times became better with him. He turned his attention to carpet machinery, and in 1845 he perfected a loom for weaving of two-ply ingrain carpet, and he started in Lowell, Mass., the first successful power-loom carpet factory ever in operation. His chief invention, the power loom for weaving Brussels carpet, was completed a few years later. But patents on it were purchased by an English firm for $100,000.

The whole number of patents issued to Mr. Bigelow by the United States patent office is thirty-six. By his inventions, the cost of weaving coach lace was reduced at once from twenty-two cents a yard to three cents; and the cost of weaving Brussels carpet from thirty cents to four cents!

E. P. STEPHENSON,
Manager.

The county commissioners met yesterday and cut out a good deal of work to do to day.

The noonday prayer meeting in the Y. M. C. A. rooms will be conducted to-day by the Rev. Dr. Kirkwood.

There will be a running race, quarter mile, on the fair grounds next Thursday for $100 a side between Mr. B. Halley's bay mare and "Darling."

All the material for the gas works has arrived and the work will now be pushed forward rapidly. Mr. Irland will put up three or four gas posts and present them to the city.

The W. S. Jackson Hose Co. will hold their annual meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year at the office of Mr. Wm. Harrison, this evening. A full attendance of members is requested.

Lieut. McCauley, of the third cavalry, who has charge of the United States couriers between Rawlins and White River, has measured the distance between the two places, making it 161 miles by the road now traveled, but by following a new route from Snake river the distance can be reduced to 148 miles.

The public schools of this city opened for the winter term yesterday. The department, under the charge of Miss Noyes, met in the old college building, and Miss Wadleigh and her pupils moved into the public school house. Unity hall, which was formerly occupied by Miss Wadleigh's department, is being moved to the new school lot in the northern part of town.

We had occasion to call in at the grocery store of Mr. T. E. Sherman yesterday and were not a bit surprised to hear that the large amount of business that is transacted there daily is steadily increasing. Mr. Sherman is still in Canada on a visit, but is expected back in a few days. When he left he placed Mr. L. Scott in charge, and from present appearances he seems to have carried out his work to the letter.

The city council held their regular monthly meeting last evening with Mayor Curr in the chair and Aldermen Humphrey, Kennedy, Lennox, Robbins and Rogers present.

Mayor Curr read a statement to the council to the effect that he had requested Superintendent Carithers to open some of the fire plugs and use the surplus water to irrigate the city trees which are sadly in need of attention. Superintendent Carithers declined to comply upon the ground that such a use of the water was forbidden by ordinance.

After reading this statement the Mayor asked for some action upon the matter by the council. Alderman Rogers supported the action of the superintendent of waterworks but after some discussion, the following motion was passed all the aldermen voting in the affirmative with the exception of Rogers:

Resolved, That Messrs. Carithers and Martin are to perform such work as may be directed by the mayor and the superintendent of water works is instructed to use the water from the fire plugs for irrigating purposes.

Mr. E. C. White was appointed as one of the police force of the city.

A resolution was introduced by Alderman Rogers, and adopted by the council, instructing the city clerk to issue a permit to Colorado College to use the city water until June 1st free of cost.

A committe of three, consisting of Aldermen Kennedy and Lennox and City Council Williams was appointed to prepare an addition to the liquor ordinance to regulate and restrict the sale of liquor by druggists for medicinal purposes.

After auditing and passing the following bills the council adjourned:

STORM-BELEAGUERED.

Ruby Camp Blockaded by Snow.

From the regular correspondent of the GAZETTE.

RUBY CAMP, December 23.—Last week we we were favored with five fair and clear days, and a temperature more like October than December. During these an effort was made to open the Ohio Creek road by tramping down the snow between Irwin and the freighters' camp, near the head of Ohio creek, a distance of five miles. The work was completed on Friday. Saturday an attempt was made to get a team through, but given up after the first half mile. Before tramping, the snow had an average depth of five feet. This was tramped down to about three feet, and given a surface which would carry men, but horses sank to the ground at almost every step, which made it worse for them than if it had not been tramped.

As many were in pressing need of supplies it was concluded to begin the shoveling out of a track for sleds to which horses would be hitched; one before the other; but Saturday night set in with snow and wind, and Sunday was the stormiest day we have yet experienced. Snow fell heavily during the whole day, and the wind drifted it so that at times objects but a few yards a away could not be seen. The road is now in worse codition than before and the storm yet continues. In consequence of this a number have dispaired of getting supplies in and have left, and others are preparing to go. It looks now as though we were to be dependent upon snow shoes for what we must get here.

The winter has been unprecedently severe in the Gunnison valley, and is no doubt so here. Should the weather clear and remain so for a couple of weeks things might then look very different from what they do in the present storm: the road might then be open and be kept open until the spring storms. We have had no severe cold. Seven degrees has been the coldest recorded by self registering thermometers. In Gunnison I hear that it has been several time as much as twenty degrees below. This agrees with my observations in San Juan—colder in the valleys than in the mountains.

An effort was made by Col. Holt and Mr. Cornwall to get in supplies for working the Forest Queen this winter, but I learn that Mr. Cornwall had given it up as impossible when he left here a few days ago. The mine is likely to be idle until spring.

Mr. R. Basey who has a lease on the Ruby King mine, which joins the Forest Queen, and is on the same vein, had been anxiously looked for during the past few weeks, and on whose coming it was expected a force of men would be put to work on the mine, but it is now reported that he will not be in. It is a matter of deep regret to the whole camp that these two great mines, out of which many thousands might have been taken from each, at comparatively small expense should remain idle during this winter. Had those been worked we would not now be snow bound, for the shipment of ore which might have been taken from either one would have kept the road broken.

With a change of weather it is hoped an effort will be made to get in what is needed and these mines be worked. The Indians receive many curses for causing the present scarcity of supplies; but it does not appear that they intended frightening the whole western half of the state when they rebelled against Agent Meeker and attacked Major Thornburg.

Communication between the different portions of the camp is so difficult at present that I do not know what is doing beyond my immediate neighborhood. So far as I do know, all is encouraging, and all mines are increasing in richness and in quantity of ore, as developments progress. The Little Minnie, which is directly above my cabin, a fourth of a mile distant, has now eight feet of ore, which looks if it would run well, and the hanging wall is not yet reached. Near this there are other claims which look almost as well, but in these work has just been suspended for the winter, for lack of supplies. The Lead Chief is sustaining the reputation it gained in the fall for rich ores, both in the original opening, and in the leased portion.

A couple of eastern men arrived on Satday and left to-day, who came for the purpose of investing in mines. I have not learned whether they made a purchase or not, but they appeared pleased with the camp, notwithstanding its present unfavorable aspect, and the severe storm of Sunday. They examined a number of mines.

E. C.

A classical miner has named his mine on. The first man he talked about it h was an Irishman who wanted to know if he had named it for Patrick O'Ryan, and a newspaper printed it Onion He now thinks of changing its name to Poker Deck, and then everybody will know what it means.

Opening of Colorado College.

The new building is so far completed that it was formally opened for the use of the college yesterday morning. The Hon. D. Russ Wood, vice president of the board of trustees, Mayor Curr and a number of others were present.

After devotional exercises, conducted by President Tenney, brief speeches were made by Major Henry McAllister, chairman of the building committee, President Edwards, of the State Agricultural College, and Professor Alsop, of Haverford College, Pennsylvania. The term opens with pleasant prospects. There were forty pupils last term, nearly all of whom were in their places yesterday morning, and about a dozen new ones presented themselves, some of whom, however, failed to pass the required examination.

The exercises were held in the large southeast room of the college, which presented a very handsome appearance.

The college library occupies the northeast room, and contains a number of valuable works. There are many works of reference and general literature. The religious books represent no especial sect or denomination. The students take great interest in the library, and additions are constantly being made.

OUT WEST.

The Rico school board has neglected to qualify.

The snow is six feet deep on Mount Sneffles.

The Trinidad News has again become a morning newspaper.

J. M. Stover who was so severely burned by an explosn of slag at Grant's smelter in Leadville recently, has since died.

The Ouray Times reports a coal oil famine not a drop of this indispensable to be had in any of the stores, and the rush for candles tremendous.

Mr. J. M. McKeen, of Golden, the present checker champion of Colorado, has played a match with Mr. Westcott, of Denver, whom he defeated.

Trinidad has a population of 3,020. She can claim under the general laws of Colorado to be a city of the second class and has so been declared by the governor.

The Silver Cliff Prospector says: "In pursuance of a custom inaugurated three years ago, by this firm, on Christmas day, D. D. Miller issued a sack of flour to every widow and minister in the county."

An avalanche passed over the Bonanza tunnel recently, utterly demolishing the blacksmith shop the timbers of which were nearly a foot square, and covering the entrance of the tunnel so that the men had to dig out the work of some hours.

A mountain lion belonging to a Pueblo druggist was ornamented the other day with a blue ribbon tied around its neck to which was attacked a card which bore the touching inscription, "Meet me by moonlight alone. No one has consented to meet him yet.

We learn that two Las Vegas girls recently tried to discover what attractions reside in whisky and cigars. Retiring to an out-of-the-way place they prepared themselves for the spree, but brought the experiment abruptly to an end by trying the cigars first.

A Kentuckian was swindled out of $40 at La Junta on Tuesday by a train boy, but pulling out a "pepper box" he compelled the "peanuts" to return the money, also taking his hat, coat, and vest, sleeve buttons, and was about to take his shirt, but the starting of the train put a stop to further proceedings.

The Ouray Times says it is quite a common incident in Ouray hotels to see a man stalk solemnly into the dining room, and after taking his seat remove from his pocket a dab of butter in paper, which he places at his own plate and offers to no one else. When through his meal, the butter is carefully wrapped up and deposited in his pocket for another meal. Butter is scarce and the hotels cannot get it at all. It is with the other supplies on the road.

The Silver World speaks as follows concerning the exceptional severity of the winter: "Never has such a winter been known in San Juan as the present one. Since last issue snow storms have been frequent—although the snowfall has not been heavy. The worst of the weather has been the winds, which drifted the snow badly, and has been very tedious to persons exposed to its force. On Christmas Eve, too, a cold wave, which passed over the entire country, reached us, and the coldest weather ever known here was experienced that night; in fact, it was very cold throughout Tuesday and Wednesday. Reference to our weather report will show the range of the mercury, the lowest point reached being 27° below zero by a majority of the thermometers—31° and 32° being indicated.

Personal.

Postal Agent Hammond was in the city yesterday. He will return to the city with his family in the spring.

Mr. Ed. Carver, who has been operating in mines at Leadville, returned to Colorado Springs Sunday.

We had the pleasure yesterday of a call from President E. E. Edwards of the state agricultural society. He has been attending agricultural institutes at Del Norte and Monument.
